Freshman year: It is the first time you ever take a final. You sit there, the test in front of you, and stare at the clock. And you swear, the hour and twenty minutes seems to be taking FOREVER.

Sophomore year: You finally get to take Behind the Wheel for driver's ed. You can't wait to get some freedom! But you wait, and wait for your license. It seems to take absolutley FOREVER.

Junior year: PSAT, PLAN, SAT, ACT...how many letters can they throw at you? Between school, college tests, and everything else, the year seems to drag on FOREVER.

Senior year: The end is in sight! But there are still two semesters of work and at least one set of finals looming in the distance. The year mockingly keeps you from your diploma. The wait to graduate seems to last FOREVER.

But in reality, nothing lasts forever, does it? Finals end, your driver's license picture is hideous, the test results get mailed home, and you walk out of high school as a graduate. But those memories, those people who made it all possible, they will stay with you. Treasure these four years of your life. They may fly by joyfully, they may not. But remember, during those years, you are...

Building..a new tradition...that lasts forever

Classes Resume

Freshmen intently listen while principal Ron Logeman talks about beginning the years of high school.

Freshmen anxiously await to get into Senora Ellis's Spanish I class

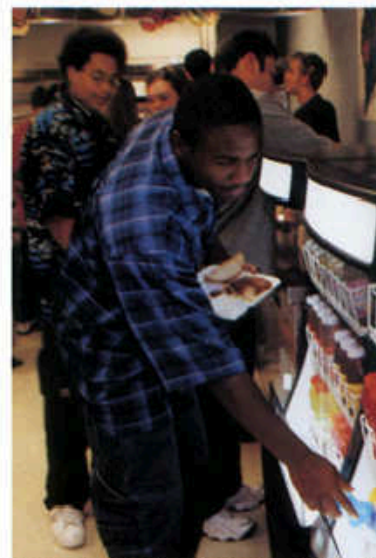

Good friends, juniors Taylor Panovich and Lauren Barrows snatch a minute to smile.

Seniors Rachel Mele and Christen Cleveland drive up, excited for their last year of school.

Seniors Jake Gurke and Lucas Murray catch up after a long summer break.

Freshmen find their lockers and snap on their own locks for the first time.

A group of seniors talk to Mrs. Svea Patrick about their summer fun.

The Tres Amigas are thrilled to be in Spanish class together for a fun year.

Freshman Robert Odumuyiwa figures out how to work the microwave during lunch.

Senior mentors are thanked by Principal Ron Logeman for helping the freshmen on their first day.

Mrs. Sharon Kamowski works hard to make sure the computer is ready to go.

A group of students casually block the halls on their first week of school.

Junior Josh Kocemba makes a good impression his first week by being tardy.

Summer vacation was over. 600 students and 70 staff members were stuck back indoors on a warm, sunny day. A slew of kids stood in line to purchase new locks. Freshman mentors gave a tour of the building and showed the freshmen their classrooms. The different classes met in the auditorium for a short orientation from principal Ron Logeman. Students were now able to enter into a fully finished school.

The first week of school went as usual. New classmates and teachers welcomed the year to meet new friends and get acquainted with their schedules. A few schedule mix-ups occurred, but the counselors quickly settled the problems. With power and dominance the seniors made sure that the underclassmen would learn the unspoken rules. For instance, when you go up the wrong side of the stairs or through the wrong door, you will definitely be told the RIGHT way to go.

Everyone was trying to learn his or her own new schedule and where his or her teachers' classrooms were located. Looking around new classes for familiar faces filled the week for many students. Meeting the new students gave chances to make new friends. The week was finally over as the bell rang at 2:37 on Friday, and everyone just made it through the first week of school.

Rivalry Continues

The seniors put on their game faces.

The race is on as the juniors try to take the sophomores in the wheelbarrow race.

Mrs. Danielle Ellis, Anna Guardalabene, Christina Burdeaux, and Gina Flanagan smile.

ANYONE CAN CAN-CAN!
You can can-can too.

Ms. Darlene Musbach fits her role to a T on hat day.

Seniors Natalie Montalbano and Anthony Kosar defeat juniors Atek Pandya and Jessica Frigon.

Decathorama and homecoming week brought both class rivalry and school spirit together. On Sunday, September 14, students, staff, and faculty congregated at Wilde Field. The adults came prepared to be accurate judges, deal with any problems, and show support for the school while the teenagers competed for victory in numerous events. The day was kicked off by the human ladder. Almost immediately a conflict of opinion called for a rematch. After some discussion, the competitors relented and the juniors were confirmed the winners of the event. Relays, races, and contests followed with the male drill team routines performed in between. The three hour day was concluded by the human relay's slip n' slide. The juniors ended up winning overall and took a drastic lead in the homecoming week challenge.

The next day brought further competition at the school as each class and the faculty and staff rallied together to gain the lead in homecoming week points. Participation in pajama day, hat day, tropical day, class shirt day, and blue and white day created fluctuations in the collective points throughout the week. Hall decoration, float design, the battle cry from the pep-rally, and breakthrough points were also added in as additional variables. The scores were tallied and by the end of the week it was obvious that the senior class had won. Although the official homecoming week had ended, the battle between classes had not. There is no doubt that this affable war between seniors, juniors, sophomores, and freshmen will last, for what seems like, forever.

by Carolyn Sarb

Junior Brittany Granat explores the senior hallway on hat day.

Junior Greg Slade strolls into the school sporting red, white and blue.

Senior Tom Heatherly wants to eat the watermelon but Pia Daniels shoves him along.

Seniors Jane Smallwood and Joe Giovannetti rolled out of their respective beds for p.j. day.

Senior Jack Otto brings school spirit and a caffeine jolt to class on pajama day.

Show Some Spirit

The male drill team watches while Brandon Davis busts a move.

Samantha Fisher kisses Steven Gockley for Kiss-a-Senior.

Nick Serritella gets ready to crown the homecoming queen.

Senior class members get on their feet and show some spirit.

TUG OF WAR

John Eugea and Lauren Tarasewicz walk under the arch arm-in-arm.

Mrs. Jennifer Pomatto gets pied. But she proves to be a good sport...in revenge.

Kasey Herrmann executes a flawless butterfly during the flag routine.

King and queen, Bill and Rachel Mele, are happy to share this moment together.

Ben Whitnell and Alanna Stillo present the court members by reading their memories.

The band plays up beat marching tunes to pep up the school.

Stephanie Rapciak performs her class dance routine.

The homecoming pep assembly started with the coronation of the king and queen. The suspense of who would be crowned king and queen grew with every court member that walked into the gym. Every student hoped the person they voted for would win. The runners-up were Lauren Tarasewicz and Paul Mutschler. Last year's king, Nick Serritella, came back to crown the queen. The king and queen were the twins, Rachel and Bill Mele.

Next was Kiss-a-Senior and Pie a Teacher. The senior class raised the most money to pie Mrs. Jennifer Pomatto and Mr. Mark Cunningham. Following these events, the flag corps, cheerleaders, and the drill team performed routines prepared for the pep assembly. The senior male drill team also performed their winning routine. Then each class presented their breakthrough. The breakthroughs were judged by teachers. The senior class's breakthrough was victorious.

Finally, the football team came out onto the gym floor. Coach Dan Sanko talked about the season and got everyone pumped and ready for the big game. The band played the school song while the cheerleaders, drill team, and flag corps performed. Students and faculty left the gym excited for the homecoming game.

Homecoming Blowout

Homecoming king and queen, Bill Mele and Rachel Mele smile during the game.

The football team raise their helmets after a hard earned win.

The cheerleaders' decorations liven up the stands.

Senior Tee Crowder runs for a touchdown while avoiding the defense.

Senior Paul Mutschler defies gravity as he makes a diving tackle.

The football team runs onto the field amid the wild cheering of their fans.

On Saturday September 20th, the bleachers were filled with fans ready for an exciting homecoming game. It was a conference game against Manteno. First was the junior varsity game. It ended in a thrilling 40-18 victory. The varsity game started off with a quick touchdown by Tee Crowder. Guy Diehl had a great sack on Manteno's quarterback. This forced the quarterback to fumble, and the ball to be recovered by Paul Mutschler. A touchdown was shortly made by the aggressive offense. The defense held strong the entire day with great effort from Tom Heatherly, Paul Mutschler, and Guy Diehl. "It all starts with the defensive line," said Guy Diehl when asked why the defense has been so effective. By halftime the score was 34-6, with Manteno trailing.

The halftime show kept the energy level high. The cheerleaders, band, flag corps, and dance team all had great performances. The flag corps had synchronized routines to the band's theme songs from Star Wars, Superman, Jaws, Mission Impossible, and Indiana Jones. The dance team performed their new routine to the song "Boom." Cheerleader Julie Kmet said, "We did a cute routine to M. C. Hammer." In the second half of the game, Manteno was finished off. Quarterback Jon McDonald threw great touchdown passes. "Our offensive line blocked well and we did everything we could to win. We are getting better every week, and we just keep doing it," said Jon McDonald about the team's ability. The game ended in a 49-14 victory. The team brought their record to 3-1 as they headed towards the end of the season.

by Nicole Sherman

Junior Mike Spiel breaks away with the football to gain some yards.

Senior Vance Exner stretches out before the game to warm up.

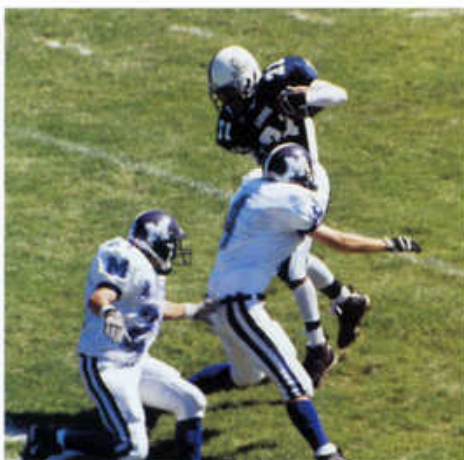

Junior Brett Fox prepares to get rid of the football during the varsity game.

Senior Jon McDonald looks down the line to see who to hand the football off to.

Junior Scott Fox makes an impressive catch and runs the ball down the field.

Senior Mike Doxle makes a nice catch right over Manteno's line.

Coach Ron Jaegle and senior Richie Bauerlein watch the team make a great play.

A Tropical Night

"Everybody clap your hands!"

Joanna Shadowy and Guadalupe Mendoza take a picture with their festive leis.

Chaperones Mrs. April Sorce and Mrs. Danielle Ellis work the Tiki bar.

Couples crowd the dance floor and juke to "Baby Got Back."

Sophomore girls groove to the music and try to attract attention.

Chaperone Officer Simmeral pours age appropriate drinks for the thirsty dancers.

Maggie Brennan and Mary Beth Hepler get together as they enter the dance.

Homecoming king and queen lead couples on the dance floor.

Another Homecoming week drew to a close and another dance lifted everyone's spirits. The homecoming dance took place on the night of Saturday, September 20th. Student congress members stayed after school on Friday to set up the commons and decorate. They wrote the names of people attending the dance on paper pineapples. The students wanted a new look for the homecoming dance so they used icicle lights and turned the snack bar into a Tiki bar. The dance had a tropical luau theme with palm tree decorations. Leis were given out to the dancers upon arrival to add color to the atmosphere. As the music played, couples and die hard dancers filled the floor.

The homecoming court was recognized and twins Bill and Rachel Mele, homecoming king and queen, were introduced. They led the song, "A Moment Like This," in place of the original theme song, "Can't Help Falling In Love," by the wise choice of the disc jockey. The seniors cherished their last homecoming with their friends.

After a hectic week of Decathorama, spirit days, dress and tie shopping, and all other preparations, the dance was a perfect ending. The planning and hard work paid off and the event left students satisfied.

Creative Ways to Teach Valuable Lessons

Jon Thompson and Andy Fisher listen carefully to Mr. Beato's motivating speech.

Juniors Rita Otto and Katie Ferrari act out "The Shipman."

Senior Christen Cleveland gives her lesson to the class.

Mrs. Valorie Miller's students say "Let's get this class started!"

Student teacher Ms. Maureen Kasdorf reviews her book.

Sarah Fuyes gives her speech on wishing to meet Julian Marcus.

Ellen DeSitter gives her speech about dreaming to meet Leonardo DiVinci.

What is the only class in which students could dress up as a favorite character in a novel, re-enact scenes from plays, read fascinating stories, and have fun? English class of course! Students were always talking about the things that were going on in their classes; from Shakespeare to grammar, the teachers provided lessons in different aspects of English literature and language.

Students were offered a variety of English courses. Freshmen and sophomores were required to take English I and II. Juniors and seniors were allowed to choose. They could choose from classes such as creative writing, and business communication, or traditional English. Honors courses were available by invitation only. Christen Cleveland said, "Mr. Beato taught me how to write better, show instead of tell, analyze and understand stories' messages that authors try to get across. He teaches philosophies and morals that you can use in everyday life. His class is great!"

Mrs. Truemper took a group of students from the school to England as a learning experience. The trip was to further students' understanding of British literature and to experience traveling to a different country.

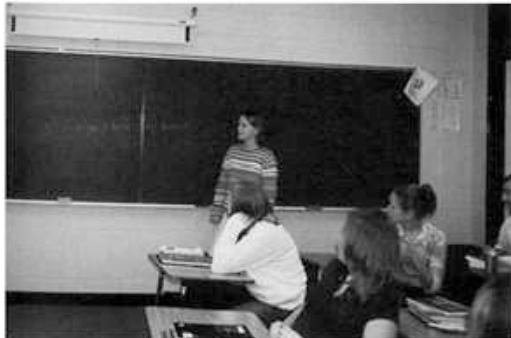

by Cyndi Entwisle

Traveling Through Languages

Natalie Montalbano studies her notes before a "quizito."

Jaci Entwisle enthusiastically fills in the last answer.

Madame Patrick captivates the class's attention with the lesson.

Phil Maris, Shayna Rosenstien, and Nybojsa Brikic play Spanish Jeopardy to review before the test.

Sonali Nath, Doaa Sakr, and Veronika Vajdova take a study break.

Señora Swanson teaches her class the basics of Spanish verb conjugation.

Two heads are better than one. Donny Heizer and John Morton help each other at the board.

"Me encanta estudiar una idioma extraño!" (I love to study a foreign language!) Students were offered the option of studying French or Spanish. From Spanish I and French I and on, students had tons of fun learning and speaking in different languages. The Spanish IV classes enjoyed buddying up with third grade students from Gary Elementary School in Chicago. They visited the elementary school and exchanged letters. The French students were offered the chance to go on a trip to Paris over spring break. This trip allowed students to get a look at what it was like to be in France and apply what they had learned in the classroom to real life.

Mrs. Danielle Ellis wanted her students, "to be able to communicate in a foreign language and have fun with it." Other teachers in the department were Ms. Svea Patrick, Ms. Kathy Sally, and Ms. Kathy Swanson. They had exciting methods to teach students the different languages by watching movies, playing games, and doing projects. All of these methods, and more, helped students understand new languages and culture. Being able to study other languages gave students a larger view of the culture of different countries. Students learned the importance of learning a foreign language and had fun along the way.

by Cyndi Entwisle

Socially Studying the World

Freshman Stephen David takes a break from his studying to smile for the camera.

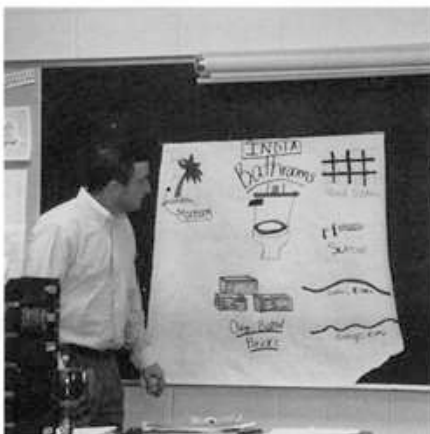

Seniors Lauren Tarasewicz and Nicole Riha explore the value of friendship in psychology.

Senior Michelle DeSitter drew the pastel of Mount Rushmore featuring (left to right) Mr. Javior, Mr. Davis, Mr. Howell and Mrs. Jaegle.

"Where's my guide!?" Senior Nicole Sherman finds her way through the halls during the blind walk experiment.

Senior Dan Modaff tries to run the blindfolded Kunal Savkur into a wall.

Mr. John Davis shows off a poster displaying Native American civilization advances.

Understanding the fascinating past is a hard thing to do, but the social studies teachers had plenty of exciting and informational ways to help out along the way. From 800 B.C. in ancient Greece to 1914 in Germany during World War I, it was all covered.

Through powerpoints, movies, group thinking, projects, and much more, Mr. Jeff Javior, Mr. John Davis, Mr. Bruce Howell and Mrs. Christine Jaegle guided students to be high school historians. "If you don't remember history, your are condemned to repeat it. To understand what made the world what it is today based on ancient civilizations makes learning history important. I like to prepare students to succeed in the real world and for them to have the education in any subject will take them to new heights," said Mr. John Davis when asked why he loves teaching World History.

Social studies is not just about the past, it is about learning the social sciences of the world, too. Students enjoy being blindfolded and guided through the halls in psychology and participating in meaningful debates in American government. Seniors in government classes got to experience passing their own bills and discussing current events that went on all around the world.

Visualizing the Future

The technical world always changes; the world depends on technology. Students interested in learning modern technology were offered a variety of courses using today's latest equipment. Photography, woodshop and technology were the classes taught by Mr. Ralph King. These classes were all very fun and informative to students who were thinking about careers in the related fields.

Photography students learned different techniques of how to take the perfect picture. They also developed their own film, enlarged the negatives and printed them out. Woodshop students were always seen walking around the halls showing off their latest breadbox, c.d. and cassette holders or any of their other creations. Senior Lindsey Wagner said, "I love the hands on experience that woodshop gives me."

During technology, students became very familiar with computers. They were able to explore the latest programs while making powerpoints, websites, technical drawings and final projects to present to the class. These classes allowed students to express themselves through their creativity, while having fun with new technology.

Mr. Ralph King assists senior Drew Gwilliam with his wood work.

Senior Christina McQuirk chisels away at the wood she is using for her project.

Cooking Up Skills for the Future

Advanced food prep students pose with the pumpkins they creatively carved.

Senior Shari Bratanch and junior Megan Loftus cook together.

Senior Steve Gockley can not wait to try his oatmeal crisp.

Seniors Frank Ferari and William Bieneman get excited about shrimp.

Seniors Nicole Sherman and Bridget Smith check if the food is done.

Sophomores Sam Uster and Jennifer Kmet study hard.

There were a few different courses that students could have taken to prepare themselves for the future. Classes included child development I and II, food preparation I and II and consumer's education. These classes were taught by Mrs. Lorrie Pfeiffer, who was a new addition to the teaching staff.

Child development courses I and II taught students how to work with young children and good techniques for caring and raising them. The students got to interact with pre-school aged children and plan daily lessons to entertain the children. Every student in the class got to take home the "Think It Over" dolls to take care of for an entire weekend.

Food preparation courses I and II gave students the opportunity to learn about different foods and ways to prepare them. The students were able to cook a different meal every week and as the weeks went on, the students got more creative and skilled. Great smells filled the hallway outside the food prep room.

Consumer's education was a course that sophomores were required to take for one quarter. Students learned how to balance checkbooks and how to be a smart shopper in today's hectic market.

by Megan Courtney

Exercise With Your Friends

Senior Matt Casey demonstrates a perfect punt.

Swish! The freshmen work on their basketball skills in an intense competition.

The sophomore girls learn to work together in a challenge of COPE.

Freshman Chris Serritella pumps some iron. His look of fierce concentration is inspiring.

Juniors Sierra Griffin and Nicole Lenke exercise intensely while chatting up a conversation.

Students try to remember the pattern to get across the tarp.

Mr. D'Amico encourages seniors Danielle Haas and Chelsea Barry to be all that they can be.

The one class where students do not have a chance to fall asleep in is gym class. Gym teachers Mr. Jim Steben, Mr. Dan Sanko, Mr. Mark D'Amico, and Mrs. Debbie Kehoe made sure that the students kept active and broke a sweat during the hour. Students were given a variety of sports to choose from such as flag football, soccer, volleyball, basketball, badminton, hockey, softball, power walking, archery and weight training. After spending a few weeks on each sport, the students took a written test about the sport they chose, along with skills tests throughout the unit.

All of the grades were required to take gym class. Exceptions to the requirement were sophomores who only took it for one semester and seniors who could opt out while participating in a school sport. In addition to the sports, freshmen were also required to spend one day a week in a classroom doing book work. There was even homework regarding nutrition and fitness skills. A new option was offered this year, the early bird gym class held at 6:50 in the morning. This class was offered to students who did not have room in their busy schedule for gym.

Senior Chelsea Barry said "Gym class is one of my favorite classes because you get to exercise with your friends and that is always fun".

lean the skeleton gets close with sophomores Stephanie Rapciak and Shawna Cleveland.

You Are What You Eat

Sophomores Ashley Valentine and Gina Flanagan ponder Mr. Dan Sanko's point.

Mr. Dan Sanko prepares another fun round of health class Jeopardy.

Everyone is all smiles to be in health class and not in gym.

First period health class impatiently waits for the bell to ring.

Sophomores Ashley Valentine, Gina Flanagan and Britnee Ruscitti study their health book.

Sophomores Britnee Ruscitti and Stephanie Rapciak debate health related issues.

The class focuses on listening to what Mr. Dan Sanko has to say about being healthy.

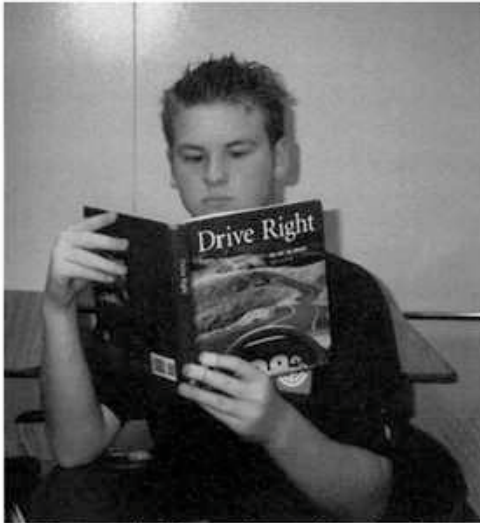

Health class taught students that the actions and choices made now affect the future. Health class proved to be a very valuable experience for students. The information given is needed to live a long and happy life. Students were taught how to independently take care of their own bodies and how to make smart choices.

In order to make the class more interesting, Mr. Dan Sanko had guest speakers come and talk to the students about health and personal experiences. The speakers informed students about topics that would normally be awkward to discuss among peers. The students participated in interactive activities to learn about their heart rate and body composition. They also played games like Jeopardy to review for tests.

In health class, sophomores learned about nutrition, drug awareness, anatomy, fitness, and consequences of intercourse. The students were comfortable covering these subjects with Mr. Sanko because he had a very open relationship with them. Students got to know that when they feel good about their body, they have a better outlook on life. This class pushed students toward the first steps to a healthy lifestyle.

Hit the Road Jack, but be back by 2:37

Mr. Don Green and his students practice backing out of a parking space.

Probably one of the most anticipated classes that sophomores looked forward to was driver's education. The brave teachers of the course were Mr. Don Green and Mr. Evan Gollan. They took each pair of students out driving 12 times to complete the behind-the-wheel portion of the class. While driving with the teachers, the students practiced a variety of driving techniques such as parking, backing around a corner, highway driving and getting the coins into the toll basket. This class only met for one quarter, sharing the semester with consumers education. Students watched a number of graphic videos on driving. As a final, the students completed a notebook containing twenty articles about driving and summaries of all the movies they had seen.

The students took a field trip to Fair Oaks Ford, a car dealership located in Naperville. There, the students listened to various speakers and got to play catch with each other while they wore drunk goggles. The goggles gave students distorted vision and a bad sense of direction. This demonstrated to students that driving while drunk is a bad idea. After 25 hours of driving and passing all of the book work and driving tests, the students were finally given their blue slips and were ready to hit the road.

Sophomore Donny Heizer practices walking straight wearing the simulation drunk goggles.

Sophomores Magdalena Sadowy and Shannon Washington listen intently in class.

The Business World

Mr. Butcher grades a confused junior Nick Boehm's paper.

If one were to stop and take a look around while driving on a busy commercialized road, one would see numerous businesses. Everyone is a consumer and deals with money at different points of his or her life. The business world is what makes the world go round. Any students interested in learning more about the business world were allowed to take the Business courses offered. The classes are seminar in business, keyboarding, Accounting I and II and Business Law I and II. Seminar in business gave students an overview of the aspects of the business world. Keyboarding taught students how to type faster and more efficiently. Accounting classes showed students how to prepare financial statements such as checks and balances. Senior Nicole Pope said that the main theme for the class was, "If you can't post you can't pass." Business law classes reviewed basic legal procedures that students will have opportunities to use later on in life.

These courses were taught by Mr. Mark Green and the visiting student teacher Mr. Adam Butcher, who was very popular among the ladies. All the business students agreed that the teachers prepared them for the outside business world.

Further Education for the Future

Kaitlin O'Reilly measures Jessica Kucharik's blood pressure.

Don't worry, Vince Huff can help Ronnie Wells with this one, Mr. Green.

Senior Kelly Guzzo secures a dummy in a stretcher in her nursing class.

Juniors Ravyn Williams and Stacy Waszak perfect their hairstyling skills in Cosmetology.

Students anticipate the bell ringing so they can go to work.

Juniors and seniors who were confident with their choice for the future were able to participate in two popular programs. Co-op was a class students took in order to work at a job of interest during school hours. These students had to work between 15-20 hours a week to be allowed in the program. The students also had to complete class work and were taught important work information by Mr. Mark Green. This course allowed students to gain some real life experience in a working environment, as well as taught students the importance of responsibility.

The other course career driven students were offered was TCD. After lunch A students would jump on a bus and head to the Technology Center of DuPage. There they would spend approximately two hours a day taking classes from professionals in various fields such as cosmetology, culinary arts, and nursing.

Students also received credit for being involved in certain assignments or Saturday morning programs. This program earns students two and a half to three and a half credits and a head start in the career of their interest.

These classes gave students a creative, hands-on approach at subjects they were interested in for the future.

Junior Emily Hamlin decides what equation to use on one of her homework problems.

Juniors Sonali Nath, Nicole Dombrow and senior Sasha Boheme help each other out.

Senior Charles Sutton attempts to hide from his math homework.

Mr. Coit rolls his lucky die to see if he will collect homework.

Multiplying Towards the Future

A trio of juniors work together on one of their Algebra II pairs checks.

Junior Jasmin Reid and sophomore Nate Seward finish their homework before the bell.

Senior Tom Heatherly wants you to get as pumped up and excited for math as he is!

Mr. Jaegle helps sophomore Jennifer Kmet and freshman Melissa Patterson on a problem.

How would anyone ever know how much to tip a person without having ever taken a math course? This is one example of how math classes have all sorts of information that students will use later in life. Students were required to take at least two years of math, but most choose to take the full four years.

There was a variety of math courses that students could take. The first math course was applied mathematics, which was a basic review of previous math concepts already learned. Most freshmen students started with the Algebra I course, which started by introducing students into statistics and probability. There was also Algebra Parts I and II, the equivalent to Algebra I, with material split over two years. After algebra, students move on to geometry to learn about reasoning and solving proofs. Algebra II was an advanced algebra course combined with a little bit of trigonometry. Pre-Calculus dealt with extended concepts of algebra. Selected students could choose to go on to take the A.P. Calculus Honors class, in which college credit was given.

The dedicated teachers who were always willing to make time to make sure that their students understood the materials were Mrs. Beth Barki, Mr. Mike Coit, Mr. Ron Jaegle, Mrs. Jennifer Pomatto, Mrs. Sharon Smith and Mrs. Barbara Stamper-Stevenson.

Learning the Miracles of Life

Mike Speil reviews his chemistry notes before he begins his lab.

Juniors Sierra Griffin and Yana Chikiris compare their lab results.

Freshman Robert Odumuyiwa uses the laptop to research how clouds form.

Juniors Paul Husch, Ravyn Williams, and Stephanie McNally try out their experiment.

Mrs. Johnson listens carefully to a student's question about cell structure in biology.

Science is becoming an increasingly more important part of the school curriculum. Freshmen were offered the opportunity to take freshman science or biology, depending on their previous year's performances in math and science. Sophomores were able to take biology or chemistry to expand their scientific knowledge. Juniors could take chemistry or physics. Seniors were able to take any classes including: physiology, advanced chemistry, science technology, and physics. Although students were only required to receive two credits of science in order to graduate, most students continue in the curriculum.

The science department was made up of Mr. Michael Crouch teaching freshman science and physics, Ms. Robin DiNardo teaching chemistry, Ms. Kimberly Coffelt who taught freshman science and science technology, and Ms. Sarah Johnson who taught biology and physiology. A new teacher joined the department this year, Ms. Raake, who taught freshman science and biology. Students enjoyed performing many exciting labs such as making the Caspian Divers in freshman science and mixing different chemicals to see the reactions in chemistry.

Freshman Dan Bennett gets friendly with the skeleton in Mrs. Johnson's room.

Turning Students into Artists

Students love working together on projects.

Senior Jessica Gorse molds some of her chess pieces to perfection.

Senior Sasha Boheme concentrates on texturizing her painting.

Senior Andy Barker points out the flaws in senior Kelly Guzzo's pottery.

The art classroom could always be seen full of students. The relaxed, entertaining and artistic atmosphere gave students a much needed break during the hectic school day. The classes taught by Mrs. Susonne Pietrantonio gave students an opportunity to truly express themselves through their art work. Lucky students with exceptional talent got the chance to place their projects on display throughout the school.

Students began their art education with Art I which started by giving students an introduction to different drawing, painting and sculpting concepts. Art II dealt with the same medias but gave students a chance to be more detailed and create some projects in two or three dimensional designs. Ceramics allowed students to work on the pottery wheel and form other clay works. The painting and drawing course taught students how to creatively use different paints, charcoals, markers and pencils. Art Workshop was an independent class where students got to pick which projects they would like to devote their time to. In addition to these classes was Commercial Art. All of these courses allowed students to be as creative as they wanted to be with their art.

Intelligent Students Earn Fun Trips

Dan Schraub, Steven Liu, and Anthony Kosar enjoy lunch.

"It's this way!"

"No! It's that way."

Humanities members argue about which way the theater is.

Sarah Andersen gets pumped about the upcoming trip.

Seniors Anthony Kosar, Kunal Savkar, and Steven Liu take a break from a meeting.

Humanities members wait with the applied math students for the bus for their field trip to Chicago.

Humanities members gaze up at the beautiful oriel stairwell.

Juniors Sarah Rauter, Rynne Gasset, Sonali Nath, and Kathryn Weller are smiling early.

Humanities was a selected group of intelligent juniors and seniors who met every Thursday during Lunch A. These meetings took place in Mr. Rick Beato's room, where members ate and discussed various topics. These topics included such things as art, architecture, literature, and music. To further the student's understanding, the group took field trips to many exciting places each month. As a group, they joined a freshman math class on an architectural walk in downtown Chicago. They also went to see Rose Rage and King John at the Chicago Shakespeare Theatre, Dracula at the Defiant Theatre, Macbeth at the College of DuPage, and the Blue Man Group at the Briar Theatre. Along with those, they visited the Museum of Contemporary Art in Chicago and the Museum of Science and Industry.

Junior Kathryn Weller expressed her positive feelings about participating in this group, "I like being able to see things, go places, and have other opportunities that I would not usually have." She was right. The humanities members had the advantage of going to so many different places that other students were not able to. The trips that members took were not anything like normal school field trips. Although the members did learn important things on their trips, they had tons of fun doing so.

Friends From Every Corner of the Globe

Seniors Jackie Schuler and Lindsey Wagner smile before going to an AFS meeting.

Juniors Taylor Panovich and Lauren Barrows take a break from the meeting to smile for the camera.

Suzanne Firestone pulls cousin Anna Gaurdalabene aside for a hug at a meeting.

Sponsor Mr. Matariyeh stays busy and plans for AFS weekend.

Sophomores Joe Costin and Greg Saul sign up for the activities.

AFS is all about meeting new people and experiencing other cultures. American Field Services was known for the intercultural exchange program that is offered to high school students all over the world.

Every year AFS members were able to host foreign exchange students and show them around our town and city. The exchange students came from all over, from Sweden to Australia, and visited for a week or longer. This gave the members on American Field Services time to get to know people from other cultures and make new friends.

AFS was sponsored by Mr. Yousef Matariyeh, who encouraged everyone to join. Junior Janay Poole was president, senior Jacklyn Schuler was vice president, and junior Carla Cook was secretary-treasurer. The class representatives were, Lauren Tarasewicz for the seniors, Sarah Pollard for the juniors, Greg Saul for the sophomores, and Shehbaz Sherwani for the freshmen. AFS held car washes, pot luck dinners and other activities in order to raise money. AFS was another way to get to know other people from different places. Meeting new people provided the chance to build life long friendships.

Seniors Lindsey Wagner and Nikki Hurt take a moment out of the meeting to take a picture.

Senior Haleigh Morgan looks over planned events at the Key Club board.

Rachel Mele uses her locker to sign up for activities.

Sponsor Mrs. Ellis and publicity manager Sagan Leasure smile for the camera.

Key Club, one of the largest clubs in the school, got off to a great start with a pizza party. This service organization was made to ultimately help others and get students involved in the community. Students signed up for events and activities and earned points to maintain an active status in the club. Aside from looking great on college applications, it provided students with the fun side of volunteer work.

Leading the club was president Brianna Smith, vice president Atek Pandya, treasurer Ashley Rodriguez, secretary Rachel Mele, publicity manager Sagan Leasure and student congress liaison Lisa Schraub. The sponsors were Mrs. Kathy Swanson and Mrs. Danielle Ellis.

Activities planned during the year included the annual blood drive, where members helped a large number of donors. The Polar Express train ride was also planned, as well as Send a Crush a Crush, food drives, and visits to the Snow Valley Retirement Center. The visits to Snow Valley were made to entertain and keep the residents company when their loved ones can not be there. All in all, Key Club was once again a huge success.

Charles Riley and Yadira Silva discuss the next C.T.A.O. meeting.

Coming Together As One, more commonly known as C.T.A.O. was an organization that united students with different cultural backgrounds. Sponsors Mr. Bruce Howell and Mrs. Cheryl Sullivan encouraged all students to join and welcomed new faces. There were no qualifications to become a member of C.T.A.O. The hope of the sponsors was to get students to experience different ethnic lifestyles. This was also the goal of President Andrea Norris who was vital to the C.T.A.O. team. Vice president Charles Sutton and secretary treasurer Lauren Parker were important to the group as well. Also of great significance was Yadira Silva who headed up the postal committee.

C.T.A.O. had many activities for the members to participate in. One of the programs was called Welcomers. C.T.A.O. members invited new students and teachers to the event to make them feel more comfortable. The club did many other helpful activities. The group participated in a crop walk to raise money for refugees from other countries and on Halloween they got to go to Great America for fright fest. Because of this organization many great friendships were made and a sense of harmony was felt among members.

Determined to Be Leaders

Erika Buchholz and Carolyn Sarb brainstorm.

Freshmen P.J. Franklin and Cory Zomick laugh at one of Mrs. Truemper's jokes.

Even before August 25, elected Student Congress members began work on school events. The group planned and ran school dances, decathorama, food drives, spirit weeks and much more. Two weeks into the year, freshman elections were completed and the new members were sworn in. This chosen panel of students displayed a huge amount of organization and leadership.

Leading the group was sponsor Mrs. Marti Truemper, executive president Erika Buchholz, and executive vice-president Carolyn Sarb. Also in command were senior class president Rachel Mele, junior president Carla Cook, sophomore president Matt Schmitz, and freshman president Cory Zomick.

In order to keep everyone on the same page, meetings were often held before and after school. Homecoming week was a hectic period for everyone on the student government. Because the game was so early a lot had to be done in very little time. The group could have easily fallen apart but determination and Mrs. Truemper's good attitude kept everything together. All in all things came out successful from the winter dance, to turnabout, to collection from Twelve Days of Christmas, to the school spirit staying strong.

Senior Anthony Kosar puts his talents to work and creates another humorous comic.

Senior Steven Liu begins the long task of editing the latest issue.

Senior Joe Giovanetti checks the focus on the new camera.

Seniors Lindsey Wagner and Steven Liu work to meet their deadline.

The monthly editions of Manestream kept students and staff in touch with the world around them. Too often people get caught up with their own activities. Manestream effectively helped everyone to notice other events. It covered local and national news, sports stories, special features, and even had its own comic strip. The staff attended various activities and interviewed coaches and team members to get the inside scoop of every event.

Sponsoring the paper were Mr. Rick Beato and Mr. Ralph King. These two kept all of the staff members on task, encouraging them to meet their deadlines each month. The editors-in-chief were seniors Steven Liu and Kunal Savkur. They held things under control and sent out every paper on time. Appointed as editor of the sports column was Erika Buchholz, Lindsey Wagner was the features editor, and managing copy editor was Rachel Mele. Anthony Kosar did the artistic work and Joe Giovanetti headed up the senior column. The staff members handled their missions despite the hard deadlines. It was their responsibility to keep people interested in the news and they never failed.

Steven Liu, Anthony Kosar, and Kunal Savkur goof around on their field trip to the University of Illinois.

"Preeti, there's a problem!"

The two editors-in-chief put their heads together.

The editors get caught up in the goal. Lindsey Wagner asks Haleigh Morgan how to get out.

When a yearbook member was spotted with a camera, shouts of, "come take my picture," were often heard. The Valé team was constantly seen roaming halls, classes, and sporting events with a camera in hand. They had an important duty throughout the school year. It was their job to capture the memories. These talented individuals were determined to give their fellow student body an everlasting record of the time they spent together.

The 15 person staff met in Mr. Beato's classroom daily for seventh hour. They worked hard to meet every deadline. On October 3, members of the staff took a field trip to the University of Illinois in order to learn new techniques and better methods of cropping, editing, and creating layouts..

Without the joint leadership of editors-in-chief Preeti Nath and Carolyn Sarb, the yearbook would not have been completed. Everyday someone would shout, "Preeti, we need your help!" or something similar. By the end of the year the group was surprised that she did not go crazy. Her sanity, however, was greatly due to the help of Carolyn Sarb, her co-boss, managing editor Beth Okrie and their section editors Erika Buchholz, Lindsey Wagner, Haleigh Morgan, and Brianna Smith.

Senior John Jachna works hard to help score points during the competition.

Varsity member Zak Kunath smiles when his team gets the answer correct.

Senior Steven Liu concentrates in order to beat the other team.

The hard-working Scholastic Bowl members took time out of their busy schedules and devoted themselves to weekly, after-school practices. They knew they had to fill their minds with hundreds of trivia questions and answers in order to have a shot at the championship. The questions varied from many different categories including sports and popular culture, to chemistry and literature. The team labored to become experts by competition time.

All team members worked diligently and got along well with one another. "As with any accomplishment, team work is the key; with Scholastic Bowl, this principal applies. The individual efforts of each member contributes to the whole," says Coach Mr. Matariyeh. It was his job to keep the members motivated for each match competed in. The captain of the varsity was senior Jack Otto and the captain of the junior varsity was Shauna Gunaratne. Both helped out their respective teams by having positive attitudes and goals. They also assisted the teams in reaching many accomplishments. All members competed against other I-8 schools and non-conference schools in many exciting and interesting tournaments. They were very successful.

Liven It Up With Art

Michelle DeSitter works to add contrast to her latest painting.

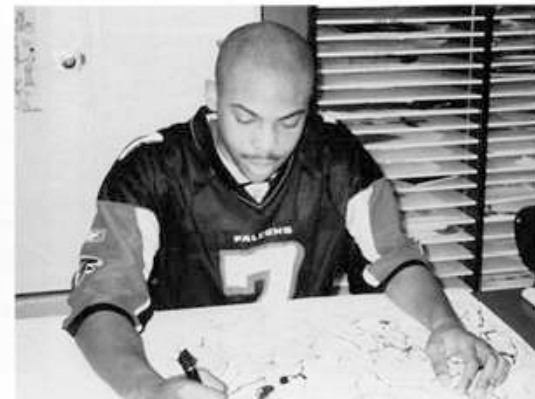

Senior Alex McLeod looks surprised when he sees the camera flash.

Senior Charles Sutton concentrates on drawing his new project using pen and pencil outlines.

Art Honors is a club where artistic students can express their own individuality. Select students with great artistic talents were chosen to come together to form the National Art Honor Society. There are some expectations to be in Art Honors, such as keeping a B average in all of your classes. To get into Art Honors the students needed to present one of his or her best pieces of art work to be evaluated.

Mrs. Susonne Pietrantoni is the sponsor of the National Art Honor Society. She helped make the year fun and exciting for all of the members. The Art Honor Society has a variety of artistic decorations and artwork all throughout the school. One of the biggest assignments for the N.A.H.S. was to paint the set and backgrounds for the fall play. They decorated a variety of things such as the windows for dances, painting murals throughout the halls and even painting garbage cans to liven up the school atmosphere.

All of these individuals contributed their hard work to make the school creative by using their artistic talents to change the persona of the school.

Senior Jessica Gorse gets a start on one of her clay sculptures.

Descendants of Thespis

Senior Katie Clark sets up the stage

Thespians cast members start clearing up the stage to take pictures.

The International Thespian Society Troupe #660, the theater club, worked hard for another successful year. They helped set up the annual fall play, Nosferatu: The Legend of Dracula. The club was guided by director Aimee Taylor, who aided to the success of theater productions. The spring musical, South Pacific, also had a large turn out of Thespians. Members of the club had to attend meetings, where they earned points in order to stay active in the group.

Members went to see other productions at a variety of theaters to experience the differences in play production. President Joe Giovannetti and vice-president Laura Cortez coordinated the efforts of the group with the help of info technician Steven Liu. Also helping behind the scenes were secretaries Brianna Smith and Lauren Tarasewicz, treasurers Kunal Savkur and Preeti Nath, clerks Katie Clark and Stacey Raker, and historians Amy Turner and Sarah Rauter.

Students involved in Thespians would never forget the passion and dedication that they put into the theatrical work preformed by themselves and fellow classmates.

Director Mrs. Kerback teaches new music to the concert choir.

A new student teacher plays the piano for the choir in place of Mrs. Kerback.

After difficult auditions, twenty students were chosen to be varsity singers, and close to fifty students, mostly underclassmen, joined as concert choir members. The choir performed four concerts throughout the year. The choir also participated in the I-8 Conference. With the new auditorium, the I-8 Honors Choral Festival was once again held at Lisle. Students from a variety of schools came to participate and work with a clinician as well as perform a variety of musical selections. Mrs. Patricia Kerback, the choir director, stated that the new auditorium was a healthy addition to, "...show off the new facilities to students from surrounding schools."

There was a great loss of senior vocalists from last year, yet there were many new talented singers who participated in choir to make it a success. High hopes and expectations were held for the new members, many of whom Mrs. Kerback worked with at the junior high. "This will be a strong building year," said Mrs. Kerback, "We have good kids with good talent and good responsibility. They are exceptional students that really go beyond." A good amount of enthusiasm was circulated around the school, making the season a success.

Saxophone players march onto the field during the half-time show.

Senior Laura Armitage and freshmen Rachel Groce and Stephanie Yen entertain the crowd.

Kathryn Weller and her flute are great parts of the marching band.

Trombone players file onto the field and prepare for their performance.

Percussion players drum a beat behind the rest of the band.

Kristin Smith plays her clarinet and reads music at the same time. Very impressive.

The marching band makes a snappy entrance with each member in step.

The band performs on the field, hoping they do not get hit by the flags.

David Rebus and Mitch Granat play drums during the football game.

The band was busy marching along to get ready to perform. The marching band performed at many football games and most of the pep rallies. The other bands were concert and symphonic band. Many students participated in symphonic band, which required an audition or having been in concert band previously. Both of the bands played in marching band and they held many concerts throughout the year. There were also several jazz bands students could participate in.

The directors of the band were Mr. Steve Green and Mr. Scott Gumina who kept the band in tune. Katie Clark and Caitlyn Getty were the band Drum Majors. They helped out the band to make the year a very successful one. The band kept on marching and performed at a variety of places. They performed at places such as restaurants and at Cabaret Night. The bands worked well with each other and accomplished many things. With the help of Mr. Green and Mr. Gumina, the band had many pleasing performances that the audiences enjoyed. The band and choir held a Christmas concert playing the Nutcracker, which people could not stop talking about for days. It was a wonderful year for the band.

Co-Captain Sonali Nath and Valerie Miller watch over the other members at practice.

Freshman Jacquee Robinson poses cheerfully at an all-school pep rally.

Valerie Miller watches over the girls carefully and notes improvements.

The flag squad was led by the newly appointed Miss Valerie Miller. The team, however, was prepared for the leadership change due to the hard work at the camps they attended over the summer. Not many seniors left the team from the previous year, but camp, which was held at Western University near Bloomington, prepared them by supplying leaders that taught the team new routines each day, from seven in the morning until around eight at night.

With a total of twelve members, choreographing was taken under control by captain Jackie Schuler, co-captain Sonali Nath, and Katie Kyle. The new group "has a lot of potential," said Miss Miller, "and they incorporate their own ideas into their performances." They performed at home football games and pep rallies to themes such as "Star Wars," "Indiana Jones," "Jaws," "Superman, Mission Impossible," and "Crazy Train." The competition song, "Pink Panther," was practiced everyday, before and after school to get ready for the big event. A well rounded squad and a great deal of effort made this a triumphant year.

Sophomores Dianne Stahulak and Britnee Ruscitti are seated solemnly to play their parts.

The Count preys on helpless victim, Lucy, while she sleeps.

Leading actress Laura Cortez undergoes a transformation into... Dracula.

Seniors Joe Giovannetti and Amy Turner discuss characterization during rehearsal.

The hair and makeup crew flash their pearly whites. Goorgeous!

Promotions crew, senior Kelli Greene and freshman Jolisa Brand smile.

The fall play went up in October, instead of the usual November date, but it was appropriate. Director Aimee Taylor put on Nosferatu: The Legend of Dracula just in time for Halloween. In the production, Count Dracula, played by Laura Cortez, left Transylvania and moved to England for fresh meat. Meanwhile, strange marks appeared on the neck of Lucy, portrayed by Bri Smith. Her sweetheart Dr. Seward, Joe Giovanetti, sent for the expert in medicine Dr. Van Helsing, Amy Turner. Other lead roles were Kunal Savkur as Jonathan Harker, and Katie Clark as Mina Murray.

While the actors were on stage, the crew was busy at work. Stage manager Stacey Raker spent hours coordinating the efforts of everything taking place backstage and in the booth. Helping her were the head stage hands, Pat Schau and Ashley Rodriguez, lights were run by Sarah Rauter, and sound by Kari Stevenson.

Once again, students had the opportunity to be designers for the play. Sound was designed by Katie Clark and Dave Rebus, and lights by Sarah Rauter and Preeti Nath. Helping out as heads of set design were Joe Giovannetti and Michelle DeSitter. Blood and other special effects were created by Christina McQuirk and Steven Liu.

"You can take the girl out of the South, but you can't take the South out of the girl."

Preeti Nath

"Just smile, nod, and back away slowly. Savvy?"

Dennis Nilles

Andrea Norris

"I'll bend and maybe bend a little more but I'll never break. Hey Muffin!"

Julia Ossler

"The glory of living is rising every time you fail. Granted, it is easier said than done, but tough times do not last, only tough people. Savvy!"

John Otto

"Everything in the world can be fixed with duct tape and with WD-40, IF IT MOVES, and it shouldn't, use duct tape. If it doesn't move, and it shouldn't, use WD-40."

Elizabeth Phelps

"Life is 5% what you're handed and 95% how you handle it."

Nicole Pope

"It really was a good story! It made sense in my head."

Nicole Riha

"Smile-It makes people wonder what you've been up to."

Jamie Riley

"The key to horseback riding is keeping the horse between you and the ground."

James Robinson

"Note to self...Make a quote."

Sean Russell

"Don't judge a man by how high he climbs, but by how high he bounces after he falls."

Martin Samocho

"CURSE THOSE EVIL OCTOPI!"

Carolyn Sarb

"Everyone is weird, some people just suppress it better than others...I'm not one of those people."

Kunal Savkur

"Life is like Six Flags. Some rides rock, some blow. But overall it's fun so enjoy and don't be afraid to ride."

Jason Schau

"Everyone plays the hand they're dealt and learns to walk through life themselves ...Not everything in life is handed on a plate."
-Aaron Lewis

Eric Schindler

"Procrastination - Hard work often pays off after time, but laziness ALWAYS pays off now."

Jaclyn Schuler

"Worrying is like a rocking chair. It gives you something to do but it doesn't get you anywhere."

Nicole Sherman

"I do not regret the things I have done but those I did not do."

Micah Shope

Jane Smallwood

"There is no sincerer love than the love of food."
-George Bernard Shaw

Brianna Smith

"Bri like the cheese, but spelled differently."

Bridget Smith

"I still panic sometimes and forget to breath, but in the end I know there's a beauty in all my imperfections."

Lisa Sutor

"I laugh in the face of danger - then hide until it goes away."

Eric Suydam

Frank Szewczyk

"If you can't dazzle 'em with brilliance, baffle 'em with bull..."

on, you will accomplish. Go, Cubs!

Love,
Mom and Dad

Dear Jason,
Congratulations! You have been blessed with many talents, especially your musical abilities. We have been amazed at all you have done. We are so proud of you! Your outgoing and compassionate personality make you a special person.
We know you will do well in the future.

Love You,
Mom, Dad, and Patrick

Daniel Lange

Dear Daniel,

As parents we are grateful and proud to have such a wonderful son who is a sharing and caring young man, (our baby) smile.

May the favor of God continue to guide and direct you into great success. May everything you put your hands to do prosper, and God bless you always.

We Love You,
Dad, Mom, Dilitta, Destiny, Doubrell,
Da Vina

Dear Brian,

Congratulations! We are so proud of you. Keep up the hard work. Whatever you decide to do, we know you will be successful. Believe in yourself, as we believe in you.

Love,
Dad, Mom, and Kim

Brian Jurgil

Dear Steven,

Congratulations, we are so proud of you - You have shown your strength right from the start. Always remember - if you are afraid of failing you are not giving yourself a chance to succeed. Believe in yourself, we do! You are one in a million-

We Love You,
Mom and Dad

Daniel Carpino

Dear Swezycheck,

You have made both of us extremely proud with your academic and athletic pursuits. As you go to college remember the words of George Bernard Shaw "You see things as they are and ask, Why not?" Dream great dreams. Give to the world more than you take. You can make a difference!

Love,

Mom and Dad

Frank Szewczyk

Dear Clay,

We picked this picture because you look so happy celebrating your 3rd birthday. This picture makes us smile as we remember all your achievements and goals. Congratulations as you graduate high school and we look forward to celebrating your future achievements!

Love,

Mom and Dad

Clay Adams

Lucas,

We are so proud of you! You have grown so much in the past four years and we are truly blessed to have you as our son. We wish you the best as you head on to college. We love you and know that you will put your best foot forward as you start on this next journey of your life.

You are loved,
Mom and Dad

Richie Bauerlein

Dear Richie,

Your intelligence, integrity, sense of humor and passion have been gifts to us. You're an incredible young man and we're very proud of who you've become. Thank you...for 18 years of joy!

With love and blessings today, tomorrow, and always,
Dad, Mom, Ronnie, and Jaimie

Dear Brandon,
Still always on the go, still the coolest!!

Love always,
Mom, Kole, Sonny, Yvonne, Nina,
Chris, Kelley, and Michelle

Brandon Davis

Dear Jacob,

Since just a small child, you always excelled at everything you did. I am so proud of you and love you more than you will ever know. Good luck in college and always.

Love,
Mom

Jacob Gurke

Dear Alex,

Where has the time gone? We are all so incredibly proud of the remarkable young man you've become. Your future is bright. Always remember that your Dad continues to walk beside you even though he's no longer among us.

Love,
Mom, Josh, Grandma, Grandpa, Steve, Sherri and Kids!

Always Here to Lend a Helping Hand...

Sophomore Mary Beth Hepler studies while she is not busy running errands.

Mr. Anderson assists senior Bri Smith with her college applications.

Mr. Anderson takes a break from his busy schedule.

Assistant Drew Logeman helps Beth Okrie sign in.

Carrie Gerdes helps Guy Diehl with his homework on their break.

Mrs. Loos smiles while she fills out students' passes.

Ms. Hochstetter looks up from her desk filled with tons of college paperwork.

As seniors graduated high school, most of them headed off to college with confidence. Unfortunately, the few people who assisted students throughout all four years of high school, do not get much recognition for their continuous support and advice. The people who were always ready to open their doors to answer your questions, about anything really, but mostly about academic decisions were two of the most supportive people students could bond with in their high school years. We all know who these wonderful people were, our guidance counselors.

Mr. Dave Anderson and Mrs. Betty Loos were those two amazing people. They really did make a big impact on all of students' decisions from which classes to take, to understanding the importance of their future. But they did not do it alone. The guidance office secretary, Ms. Judy Hochstetter, is always there to organize information for scholarships, schedules, and report card information. Also, many students spent the day in the office either studying for tests, doing homework, but most importantly running passes to students throughout the building. They were all here to watch the freshmen mature into bright seniors and guide them along the way.

Behind the Scenes of 202

Freshman Ruth Kakumanu receives assistance from Mr. Cunningham about Pride of Lions.

Principal Mr. Logeman takes a break from his busy schedule to smile for the camera.

Mr. Cunningham chuckles after sending a student back to class.

Ms. Cambell helps senior Carolyn Sarb check in late.

Ms. Kamowski and Ms. Galibur review the day's schedule on the computer.

The school board members take a break from their busy meeting to pose for a yearbook picture.

Ms. Reasoner smiles before she begins typing the golf program.

Mr. Dillard talks on the phone about the upcoming tournament with other coaches.

None of us ever seemed to really notice or appreciate the hard work that went into making the school flow so nicely. Usually, we could care less, it is school, a place we have gone to for years almost everyday of the week for nine months. As a matter of fact, we are always looking forward to getting away from school, we are just waiting for winter and spring break to arrive, but most importantly the end of the year followed by summer vacation. But really we should think about who the people are who make our education possible, the people whose jobs it is to make this happen, to help us become educated and make something of our lives.

This is a large group of important people. During school and at various school events, we usually see our principal Mr. Ron Logeman, our assistant principal Mr. Mark Cunningham, and our associate principal Mr. Dan Dillard. The group of people in charge of the biggest decisions of the school is the school board. Mr. Stephen Pawlowicz, the president, is joined by many other men and women of the community. Then there are also the office secretaries Mrs. Sharon Kamowski and Ms. Valorie Galibur the athletic office secretary, Mrs. Linda Reasoner, and the attendance office secretary Mrs. Cambell. They were all here to make everyone's day a little brighter.

Senior Kellianne Greene creates a scrapbook by cutting out newspaper clippings.

Shh..... Be Quiet!!

Mrs. Weis takes a break to read the comic section.

Senior Nicole Sherman is excited to preview a newly released book.

Senior Brandon Davis adjusts the monitor so he can do his best work.

Kristen McMurray enjoys her study hall by reading a good book.

Girls chat with each other while working on the computers during their study hall.

Senior Haleigh Morgan reaches for her favorite Danielle Steele novel.

When most think of a library environment one thinks of a quiet, dull and strict environment. There were times when the library could almost be the opposite. There was never a time when one walked past the library and students would not be seen hard at work. Teachers could reserve the library during their class time so students could do research for projects or speeches using the best resources. Students had access to the computers, card catalog, books, newspapers and magazines. During this time the library became a very hectic place with all of the students trying their best to utilize all of the helpful tools. When the library was not reserved for a class, then it was open for students to use during their study hall. If ever things got too rowdy the librarians, Mrs. Barbara Lund and Mrs. Valerie Weis, would get everything back under control.

The library was also the sponsor of Reading Wednesdays which was held every other Wednesday between 4th and 5th hour. On these Wednesdays students got 20 minutes to pick any book of their choice to read for fun. This led to busy Wednesday mornings in the library as students scrambled to find a good book.

And Now The Kickoff

Junior Mike Kilroy makes a great catch.

Junior Scott Fox breaks away with the football.

Junior Nick Iovinelli kicks off the football.

Junior Ben Whitnell hands the ball to quarterback Jon McDonald.

Sophomore Joel Beckman runs with the football to make a touchdown.

Each year the football teams start the season early with practices towards the end of the summer to prepare for their first games.

The freshman team ended the season with a record of 5-4. This is excellent for a group of students that was just learning how to work together. The junior varsity team finished up the season with a record of 4-5. As for the varsity team, they made it to the playoffs for the third straight year. They ended their season with a record of 8-3.

The coaching staff had two new members, making a total of seven coaches. The head coach for the varsity team was coach Dan Sanko assisted by coaches Mark Green, John Davis, Ron Jeagle, and Ron Murphy, along with two new coaches, Adam Butcher and Paul Kim.

Coach John Davis said, "The overall season was a success, but as a whole the team feels they fell short of their long term goals."

At every game the bleachers were packed with Lisle super fans waiting for another win.

by Nicole Sherman

Senior Matt Casey stares down his opponents while he sets up for the next play.

Senior Jon McDonald looks for the open man.

Senior Tee Crowder races past the defensive lines to make a first down.

Coach John Davis gives some advice to Phil Fernetto to use on the field.

Senior Jon McDonald looks to pass the ball to senior Richie Bauerkin.

Junior Mike Kilroy tries to get past his opponents with the ball.

Hut...hut...HIKE!

Senior Mike Doxie prepares himself for his next big play by surveying his opponents.

Setting Up Conference Champs

Senior Carolyn Sarb, starting down the other team, gets ready at the net.

Sophomore Krymese Frazier gets on her knees to dig the volleyball.

Sophomore Katie Muelhausen puts the volleyball into service.

The varsity volleyball team huddles together before the game.

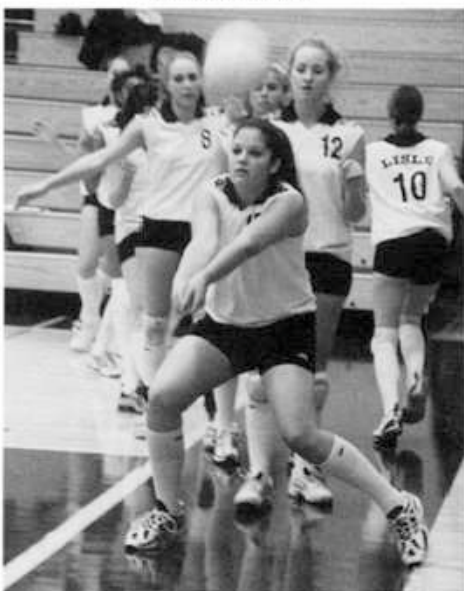

Sophomores Allison Lima and Lisa Schraub smile with Coach Kendra Meyer.

Senior Alisha Kimbro puts all her power into spiking the ball.

Senior Lisa Gartelos is first in line to perfect her pass.

The varsity volleyball team lines up for the national anthem before the game.

The junior varsity volleyball team has a group huddle.

Senior Nicole Riha gets warmed up before the game.

This year volleyball scoring changed to rally score. Yet the volleyball team was not afraid of the change, instead they took it to their advantage and put on a great season.

The freshman volleyball team ended the season with a record of 12-4. Freshman coach Kendra Meyer said, " With only nine people on the team and little experience the team has come a long way and played a great season." The junior varsity team ended their season with a great record of 13-1. Even better, though, was the varsity volleyball team which had a record of 14-0 and took first place in the conference.

The volleyball team attended a tournament at the Latin School of Chicago in which they earned third place. To achieve third place they had to play against several double A schools.

Since the volleyball team finished first in the conference they moved on and played in the regional championships. Their first game they played was against Driscoll and Lisle won. The second game of regionals was against St. Francis, previous state champions, and Lisle was unable to defeat them to move on in the regional tournament. The volleyball team put on a great season for all of their fans.

Junior Diana Demoor concentrates on making a perfect set.

Freshman Kristi Schafer makes sure that her serve is in the lines.

Make Some Racquet

Senior Kelli Greene prepares to serve.

Sophomore Shauna Gunaratne plays with a ball before the match.

Freshman Ruth Kakumanu reaches for the tennis balls.

The freshmen on the team take time out for a picture.

Freshman Sasha Strahler sends the ball over the net with one hit.

Freshmen Cindy Pistone and Jill Franck stretch out before the match.

The year was filled with many firsts for the girls' tennis team. There was a new coach, Mr. Jacob Engler. He took the job and pulled the team together.

The team consisted of 15 people, which was the largest girls' tennis team ever. The girls came together a week before school had started to discover that they had no place to practice. They looked for possible courts to play in. The Arborview Park tennis courts were their final choice.

The team lacked experience considering they consisted of seven freshmen girls, but the veteran players showed great leadership.

Even though they ended the season without a win, everyone can remember having fun just being with other members of the team. "Yeah, our road trips were always tons of fun," said freshman Kristi Schafer. "I'll always remember when Coach let us stop at Subway. It was the best."

The season ended on a good note with promises to get in touch in the off season. The team wants to improve and just play, together.

by Amy Jachna

Freshman Cindy Pistone waits attentively for the ball to come her way.

Junior Jaci Entwisle calls out the score as she serves.

Junior Michelle Ames watches the ball after a solid forehand.

Freshman Jill Franck is excited about playing tennis.

Senior Monica Giesker perfects her backhand during practice.

The coach contemplates with senior Rachel Castillo and sophomore Shauna Gunaratne.

Sophomore Shauna Gunaratne's attention is diverted as she prepares to serve.

The Best “Par” None

Junior Megan McCarthy lines up her shot and makes a putt.

Juniors Dan Schraub and Kevin Hannan carry their bags to the next hole.

Senior Bill Mele strides to the next hole after making his shot.

Junior Dan Schraub tries to get out of a wet spot.

Senior Randy Ludwigson shoots for the green and watches his ball fly.

Senior Jason Schau swings hard and hits the ball out of the sand.

Seniors Bill Mele and Randy Ludwigson watch their opponents finish a hole.

Junior Brittany Granat lines her ball up with the hole, carefully judging the distance between them.

Junior Colin O'Brien sinks a putt, earning another good score.

Junior Kevin Hannan makes a chip shot.

There's a first for everything. It was the first year with a full girls' golf team and the first time the boys' team won regionals. Coach Rick Beato coached both victorious teams leading the boys to a 15-6 season and the girls to an 8-2 season.

Senior Bill Mele was the captain of the boys' team while he earned the best average with a 41.6 and had the most scores count in the varsity matches. "This was overall one of the best years for Lisle golf. We started a little slowly, but peaked at the right time. We had a lot of fun, but also achieved so much. There are quite a few varsity players returning, so look for more of the same next year," said Mele.

Freshman Tim Ludwigson was voted most valuable player, because of his ability to hold the team's best score nine times and be a match medalist five times. "The freshman Timmy gave us much needed consistent low scores, we got good leadership and many laughs from our captain Bill, and everyone in the middle just hung on for the ride," said junior Kevin Hannan.

The girls' team captain was junior Samantha Giesler. She was also awarded the title of most valuable player. She had the team's best score four times and was a match medalist four times.

Coach Rick Beato gives sophomore Brandon Gonzales some helpful pointers.

Senior Jane Smallwood is on the run to a victory.

Battle of the Turf Runs On

Junior Nick Orlock sprints along the trail.

Freshman Claire Webb pushes her way into the lead.

A group of teammates try to relax before the race.

Junior Brad Vodicka catches his breath as he pushes for a win.

Freshman Meghan Mack prepares to overcome the competition.

Sophomore Steven DeSitter takes the lead over the other runners.

The boys and girls stepped out onto their battle field, the Lisle Community Park, ready to prove to the school that they could accomplish anything that they wanted to. The cross country team continued the tradition of winning, proving their talent with daily success. Throughout the season they pushed themselves to become better.

Then, finally, their moment to shine came. Seven boys qualified for the state cross country meet. The school was bursting with pride over their achievements. There was an honorary pep rally specifically for the seven qualified boys. They wore tuxedos, as promised, and made a surprising entrance as they came out of a blow up tent. The town congratulated them by granting them their one big wish, a fire truck to escort the boys out of Lisle to the meet.

The team's effort this year was inspirational to the students, staff, and faculty. They proved that if you put your mind to it, you can achieve your goals.

Junior Erick Valle makes a powerful kick, sending the ball down the field.

Lisle started its first soccer season. Nineteen boys were chosen for the new team. There were not very high expectations for the first time team, but they went above and beyond what everyone thought they might accomplish.

Leading them through their first season was Coach Paul Kohorn. The team captains were juniors Ryan Krausfeldt and Erick Valle. Two hour practices were held everyday after school at the field in front of the high school. The team did many drills to perfect specific skills they needed during their fast paced games. They also worked on building endurance and a team spirit.

"The year started out great and we ended it better than we expected. The last game really showed us how much we were capable of, even if we didn't win," said freshman Dan Bennett.

With only one senior leaving, most of the team will have a chance to work together more next year, making for an even better season.

The boys ended their season with a record of 25-7-3. Coach Kohorn gave good encouragement for years to come by saying "Every season, except the champions, ends with a loss, and we can learn from that."

Senior Tom Heatherly dodges as he looks for an open teammate.

Members of the junior varsity team await their chance to get into the game.

All levels of the boys' basketball program enjoyed success in the season. The varsity team was bursting with talent and they proved it all season. Four of the five starters from the 2003 Elite Eight team returned in full force. They began the season with the 27th Annual Lisle Thanksgiving Tournament. The team came out with a 3-2 record against tough competition. After the Lemont Christmas Tournament, senior Tee Crowder was selected to the all-tournament first team, and senior Pierre Parker was selected to the all-tournament second team. They concluded the regular season by winning conference with an undefeated record.

The junior varsity level brought back their skills as well. The team showed intensity all season and were rewarded with many wins. They ended with an outstanding record. The freshman team proved to be high-caliber, also finishing with a winning record and placing second in their conference tournament.

All three teams did wonderfully and proved that we are, as varsity member James Williams said, "...a small school with a lot of talent."

The Lady Lions came out with many successes and firsts this year. Seniors Erika Buchholz, Lisa Gartelos, and Carolyn Sarb were the captains of the team. In the Elgin Academy Thanksgiving Tournament the Lions swept in and took over the court to win the championship. Teammates Lisa Gartelos and Erika Buchholz were selected to the all-tournament team. In the Lisle High School Holiday Cage Classic, the team finished with an overall record of 2-2. This placed them 6th in the tournament. The girls continued to play with intensity and pulled out the conference championship, going 13-1, the only loss being to Seneca. This was only the second time that the girls have won conference. Another first for the year was when Erika Buchholz became the first girls' basketball player to score a career record of 1000 points. The team ended regular season with an outstanding record of 19-6 and headed into sectionals with a high opportunity of going far.

On the junior varsity level, the girls played their hardest. They had immediate success when they got together this winter and continued to play with strength throughout the season. They finished with an impressive record. On the freshman level, the girls were determined to live up to the expectations of the school. They played well and had many games where they blew out their opponents.

While most of the town was snuggled inside during the dead of winter, a group of 20 young ladies were actively working out.

The girls' bowling team practiced after school about three times a week at Lisle Lanes. At their practices, Coach Rick Beato worked with them on fundamentals. These included correct form for releasing the ball and focusing on hitting specific pins. After three weeks of hard work, the team was ready for its first match. All the girls did well and continued to bowl an average of two matches each week.

During the season, the team traveled to Dixon for a tournament with 24 other teams. They left school early and stayed at a hotel for the night in order to refresh and prepare themselves for a tough match the next morning. It worked. They racked up a score of 802 points from only five matches, an average of 160.4 per match.

The varsity finished 11-10 overall. Senior Katie Clark summed up her experience stating, "We had a great season; it was so much fun hanging out with all the girls on the bus, to and from matches."

Senior Sean Russell shows great sportsmanship and shakes hands with the other team.

Coach John Ruettiger encourages the boys from the sidelines.

Senior Alex McLeod shakes his opponent's hand after a difficult match.

After a slow start the wrestling team ended with a successful season. The returning coaches John Ruettiger, John Davis, and Dan Sanko chose seniors John Eugea, Alex McLeod and Frank Szewczyk to be the captains. These three captains helped the new comers and freshmen get ready for their meets and really become part of the team. They encouraged everyone to have a great season and to go farther than ever before.

The wrestling team competed in the Marian Central Catholic and placed second. They had an outstanding performance at the Walter Lutheran Tournament and won the championship.

The team saw many wonderful individual performances at the Interstate 8 Conference Tournament especially by seniors John Eugea, Frank Szewczyk, Alex McLeod, and juniors Nick Chang and Mike Kilroy.

All of the varsity wrestlers competed in regionals at Montini High School in Lombard. Eleven varsity members qualified to advance to sectionals, including the three captains. Sectionals were held at Plano High School. The wrestling team ended with a solid record. The numerous wrestling tournaments taught the wrestlers valuable skills such as teamwork and determination through the blood, sweat, toil and tears.

Dance team sisters, secret Santas, birthday breakfasts, sleepovers, camp, competitions, and games are just some of the things that brought the girls together. Over the summer, the team bonded during camp at Northern Illinois University. At camp they had a chance to qualify for the national competition in Orlando, Florida.

The team competed in two different categories: hip-hop and kick. Their theme for hip-hop, a new category, was "Shake It", and the theme for kick was Austin Powers.

For the second year in a row, the team was asked to perform during the pre-game show of a Chicago Bulls basketball game. They performed their competition routine, "Shake It".

During half time at every home football and basketball game, the girls did routines that they had learned at camp, created themselves, or learned from a professional choreographer.

The cheerleaders were busy practicing even before the school year started. During the summer, the junior varsity cheerleaders went to camp to learn new skills while the varsity cheerleaders took a few classes to help them renew old skills. Both the junior varsity and varsity squad started off their season with new coaches. The varsity coach was Ms. Kim Coffelt and the junior varsity coach was Ms. Tara Binder. The new captain for the varsity squad was senior Katie Jakalski and junior varsity squad captain was sophomore Britnee Ruscitti.

Once school started, the cheerleading squad cheered for both football and basketball players during their seasons. The HSO helped raise money for the cheerleaders to go to competitions and to hire a choreographer to help with a dance routine and music.

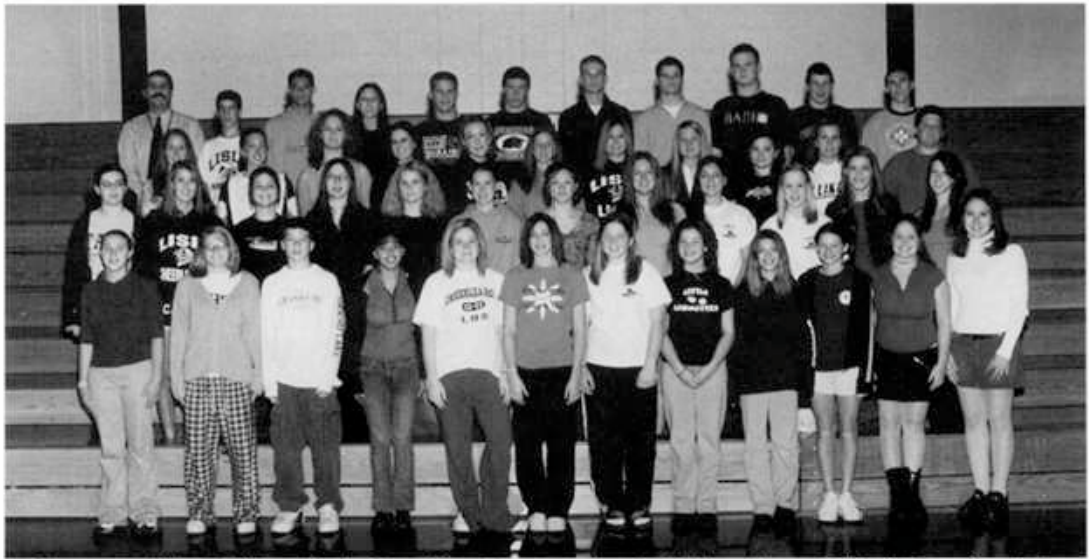

The cheerleaders performed in two competitions. In the first competition they received first place and in the second competition they received second place. The varsity cheerleaders were invited to the Lake Zurich invitational with their great competition routines. In regards to the team's performance, Captain Katie Jakalski optimistically stated, "We tried our best and came out with an awesome performance."

Senior Katie Jakalski and Junior Kelly Hurt smile at the excitement of the game.

Six senior editors (and a junior). Six returning editors from a year ago (and one to return for 2005). An all-star staff. And now that staff is completing something that might well be unprecedented. In drama, a trilogy is a three-play cycle, not a play and two sequels. Only the most powerful dramatists could even attempt a trilogy. The theme of the work needs a lot of power to drive three full plays. And somehow you – The Magnificent Seven of yearbooks – have completed a trilogy. One that covers your years here. Building . . . a new tradition . . . that lasts forever. Was it only three years ago that we were talking about doing an interlocking series of themes? Why did we never doubt ourselves? Why were we so sure we could get it done? How did we know we could overcome any obstacle? That confidence all came from you seven and especially from Preeti, Carolyn, and Beth. I hope you and your staff members are as proud of this book as I am. You have completed something no one will ever even try to duplicate. Congratulations on a great three-year run.

"Make it Happen"

Speaker Steve Matuszak talks about friendships.

Juniors Kasey Herrmann, Audrey Burris, and Michelle Ames socialize during opening events.

Student director Kristel Knutson shakes hands with sophomore Amanda Garcia.

Senior Steven Liu gives his closing remarks to other students at the end of the night.

Group leaders Shirly and senior Michelle DeSitter stand with their finished puzzle.

In the opening skit, students play Jenga as a group activity to get along together.

Speaker Steve Matuszak questions the audience of the importance of drugs.

It was a night filled with new friendships, laughter, and tons of fun! "Make it Happen" was the theme for the event directed by seniors Anthony Kosar, Nikki Accurso, and Kristel Knutson. The theme song was "Hey Stoopid" by Alice Cooper, putting a new twist on an annual event. Sponsors included Mr. Yousef Matariyeh, Officer Jeff Simeral, and the Lisle Park District.

Teachers as well as students acted as staff members. They led small groups in games and discussions. The small groups were randomly formed and gave the students a chance to get to know each other better. There were workshops that included discussions on life, such as the "Things That You Wouldn't Want to Discuss With Your Mother" and there were also arts and crafts and meditation workshops. Guest speaker Steve Matuszak entertained students with a hilarious speech about self confidence and life choices. A large pizza and cookie dinner was served to the students to end an eventful night.

Many students and volunteers participated in the skits, which were a big hit! One of the most memorable performances was done by seniors Anthony Kosar and Danny Modaff and junior Jaci Entwisle called "Mary Jane".

Nellie Forbush sings about why people consider her a Cock-Eyed Optimist.

That's My Little Honey Bun!

Seabees take a break from their work to talk to one another.

Captain Brackett, Joe Cable, and Lieutenant Harbison discuss the dilemma of Mr. de Becque with Nellie.

Emile de Becque sings "Some Enchanted Evening" to Nellie.

"Bali Hai, will call you!" sings Bloody Mary to Joe Cable as Luther Billis listens in.

Luther Billis leads his fellow Seabees in singing "There is Nothing Like a Dame".

Roger and Hammerstein's "South Pacific" was the title of the musical. The story took place on an island in the Pacific during World War II and consisted of two love affairs. The first was between a young navy nurse from Little Rock, Arkansas, named Nellie Forbush, and a local planter named Emile de Becque. When Nellie finds out about his two Polynesian children, things take a turn for the worse between them. The second was between a local trinket seller's daughter, Liat, and Lieutenant Joe Cable. Unfortunately for them, her mother, Bloody Mary, stands between them. Lt. Cable was killed in action, and Emile returned from the war to find Nellie caring for his children.

The musical was directed by Mrs. Pat Kerback. Nellie was played by senior Lauren Tarasewicz. Joe Giovannetti performed the role of Emile. Lt. Cable was portrayed by junior Mark Lindsey. Junior Jaci Entwisle acted the role of Bloody Mary. Other important characters were Luther Billis, performed by senior Jon Thompson, and Captain Brackett, played by junior Atek Pandya. The young actors and actresses put on three nights of performances, which all ended in standing ovations.

Being Part of a World Wide Honor

Senior Katie Clark lights the candle of Leadership.

The new members of the National Honor Society pose for a group picture.

Senior Laura Armitage and junior Ashley Rodriguez await the induction of others.

Juniors Scott Fox and Dominique Gidron join fellow members in reciting the induction pledge.

Senior John Jachna inducts junior Atek Pandya with a strong, welcoming handshake.

Senior Nikki Accurso cheerfully welcomes junior Scott Mutschler in to the society.

A big smile is displayed by senior Kunal Savkur as he opens the evening.

Character. Leadership. Service. Scholarship. These four qualities, as well as honor roll, must be excellently demonstrated by members of the National Honors Society. This program was established in 1921 by the NASSP. Today there are over a million students who participate in this program. NHS chapters are found in the entire US, Puerto Rico, Canada, the District of Columbia, and many US territories.

Students who have at least a 4.0 GPA, are given an opportunity to be chosen into the program. They fill out a form detailing what they have accomplished in their high-school years, and teachers then review and choose students that they feel meet the high expectations. They must be either a senior or a junior and must be very involved with activities both in school and out. This program challenges the students to develop further involvement in both the school and the community.

On the night of induction, senior officers gave speeches about each of the qualities and began to induct the new students as members of NHS. NHS is sponsored by Ms. Robin DiNardo, who closed the night with an amazing speech which ended in saying the induction pledge.

Junior Mike Spiel pitches from his mound.

Junior Brett Fox gets ready to receive the pitch.

Who's On First?

Senior Jon Thompson positions himself to field the hit.

Assistant coach Meyer stands by, surveying the game.

Coach Steben watches as his team hits in their runners to win the game.

The infield gathers to talk about the situation on hand and plan how they will get the out.

Senior John Eugea at the plate, gets ready to hit in his teammates.

Another year rolled around and another respectable season of baseball was finished. Faced with a tough season, the baseball team struggled through long practices and even longer games. The weather didn't help either, with its unpredictable showers many games had to be rescheduled.

The crowd stuck with it though, claiming a mixture of victories and defeats. Coaches Jim Steben and Pete Meyer were standing by the varsity squad with anything the team needed: giving helpful advice, showing where improvements could be made and working on those weaknesses during drills at practice.

Coach Ron Jaegle and assistant coach Tom Buchholz lead the junior varsity team to a successful season. Lisle hosted a varsity tournament in which two junior varsity players, Brandon Gonzales and Brent Walters, played and contributed to the successes. Many players including these show great promise for when they join the varsity team.

With large spirits and heads held high, the teams hope to come back next year for even better seasons.

by Dan Bennett

Senior Steve Gockley waits by second as the play gets wrapped up.

Junior Dan Schraub takes down the games statistics.

Junior Guy Diehl fires a throw to first in an attempt to make the out.

Junior Kevin Walker cautiously steps back towards the base.

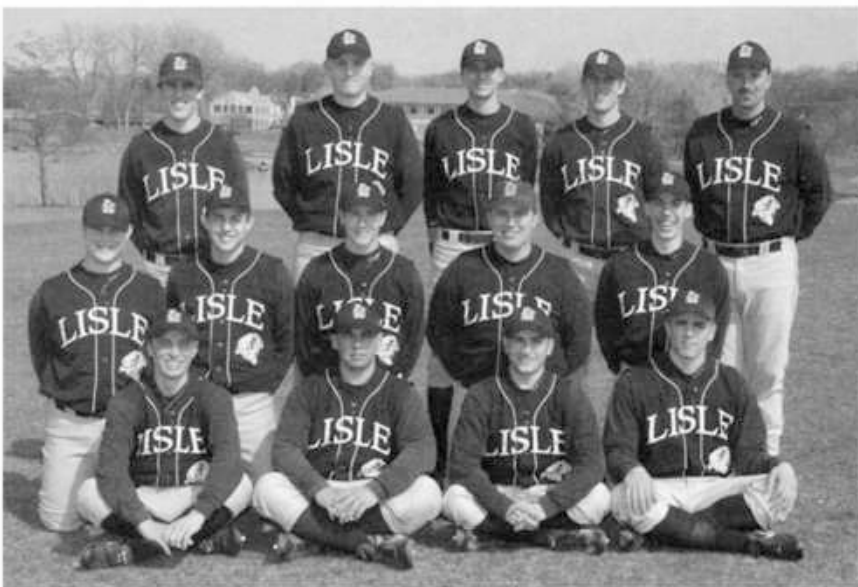

Senior Steve Gockley traps a low throw to stop a stealing base-runner from advancing.

Junior Brett Fox waits silently for the game to continue in their favor.

Junior Brett Fox breaks to first after a hit, attempting to beat out the throw.

Junior Mike Spiel takes a swing at the pitch, and makes contact.

Full Count with Bases Loaded

Varsity infield meets in the circle to plan their strategies for a shut-out inning.

Junior Katie Venard strives to beat out an infield hit.

Ready to bat, junior Anna Mulacek pulls her gloves on.

The junior varsity team watches the game and cheers on their teammates.

Senior captain Emily Johnson and Coach Javior show their excitement after a great game.

Erin Drennan gives Stephanie Sarb superstitious luck as she goes to hit.

Sophomore Jenny Reed pitches the ball for a strikeout.

The varsity team sits down to discuss the highlights of the game and possible improvements.

Junior Vanessa Kalal winds up for another of her spectacular pitches.

Coach Amanda Waters encourages the junior varsity team to victory.

Junior Beth Okrie checks the other players, as she gets ready to be hit in.

Senior Erika Buchholz smiles to her teammates before the next play.

It's like a pop fly in the bottom of the seventh with the bases loaded and two outs. The suspense builds, everyone wondering if it will be caught. These are the moments the players play for on the softball team, and the team was not let down.

Throughout the season, coaches Rick Beato and Jeff Javier did all they could to give advice and encouragement to the team. After their first conference loss to Seneca, the game proved to be a turning point and the team did not lose again until the end. The girls finished an outstanding season, ending with a 32-4 record against teams like Westmont, Wilmington, and Wheaton Academy.

Six Lisle players earned the right to be named to the all-conference team, including Erika Buchholz, Beth Okrie, Vanessa Kalal, Anna Mulacek, Bridget Holtorf, and Erin Drennan. In addition, four of them made the all-state teams. Senior Erika Buchholz made 1st team, freshman Erin Drennan made 2nd team and junior Beth Okrie and sophomore Bridget Holtorf made 3rd team.

After a spectacular season, scoring a 13-1 conference record, they excelled to take the I-8 conference championship title. The team should be proud of they have accomplished together, and eager of how well they will be able to be next year.

After a long game, Plano and Lisle show their sportsmanship.

You Got Served

Freshman Doug Anderson carefully places his shot to the other side.

Senior Bill Mele and sophomore Jason Ossler shakes hands for good luck before a game.

Senior Bill Mele makes a great backhand swing at the ball that was hit to him.

Freshman Doug Ary concentrates on getting the ball back over the net.

Senior Bill Mele awaits the ball to come to him.

Freshman Evan Kouimelis serves the ball up, eager to finish the set.

Freshman Evan Kouimelis leaps to catch a ball hit high over his head.

Sophomore Greg Saul softly tosses the ball up for his serve.

Starting with a mostly new squad, the team struggled this season to make their mark on the court. This year senior Dan Modaff decided to run for the track team instead of sticking with the group, which left the other veterans, Bill Mele, Kunal Savkur and Steven Liu to step it up on the court.

Another problem presented to the team was their practice space. The courts at the park district were taken down due to construction. They were forced to practice at the Tate Woods courts, and hold matches at Benedictine University. Without a home field and only a small crowd that came to watch, they battled through the obstacles and showed what they can do on the court.

Coached by Svea Patrick, they tried to put in all the effort they could dig up. Even with high hopes and enthusiasm, however, they could only obtain a 2-13 season record. They did, however, manage to place 3rd at the West Chicago Invitational.

After a long season and many disappointments, the team stuck together to the end in the slump for 0-6 conference record. Next year, after the seniors move on, let's hope the new sophomores and juniors will be ready to pull things back together for a great season.

Senior Sean Russell releases the shot with great force.

"We think, therefore, we're fast" was the motto of the team this year, spun off the popular Latin phrase "Cogito Ergo Sum." Although the legacy of recently departed Joe Vitello, Mauricio Ayala and Greg Peebles still loomed over the heads, the boys were ready to take on the challenge. Every meet, everyone would compare results to last year's, to track progress. Speed and endurance tests were also used to carefully calculate the individual's ideal workout for that day.

Last year, the track team nailed a triple crown for the indoor, junior varsity and varsity conference meets, and they were going for that goal again this year. A disappointment was the team taking an overall 2nd at the indoor Reed Custer meet. The next big meet was the junior varsity conference meet, where the guys fought back and earned 1st place. The varsity meet was another spectacular show, where the boys nabbed another silver. Only Paul Husch, Matt Schmitz, Mike Kilroy, and Brad Vodicka of the 4x800 meter relay team qualified for state where they made an outstanding show.

Junior Brad Vodicka starts off the 4 x 800 m relay and steps ahead of this Reed Custer opponent.

Sophomore Samantha Fisher clears the hurdle with just enough room to continue her dash.

Senior Christen Cleveland checks in with the pit judge to find her distance.

Freshman Melissa Hannan breaks free from the blocks with baton in hand.

Senior Carolyn Sarb passes the baton to speed-demon Andrea Norris in their 4 x 100.

Senior Nikki Hurt cheerfully runs in her distance relay.

Junior Katie Ferrari coasts down the backstretch of her relay.

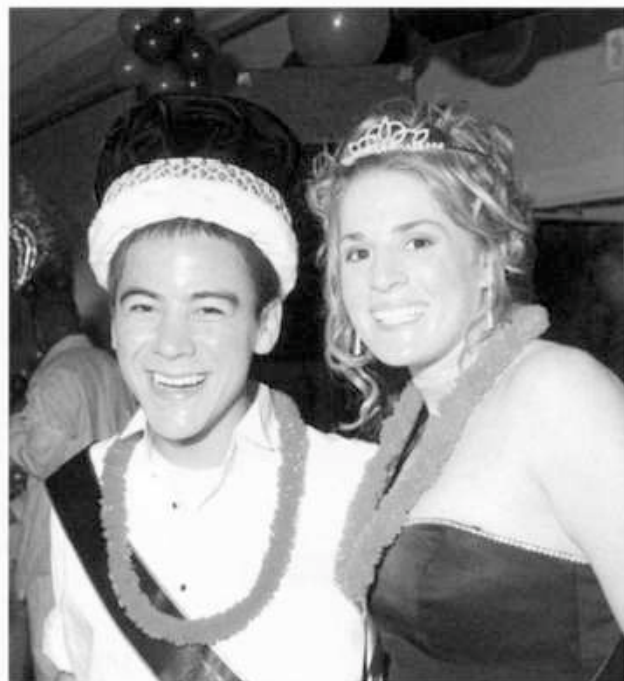

Sophomore Drayvona Cobige spins and lets the discus fly.

United the entire year and led by coach Shani Bauldrick and Vanessa Veg, the girl's team was startlingly proficient at winning. Taking top honors at the Reed Custer indoor meet was only the beginning. During the season, Sophomore Diane Stahulak and freshman Ellen DeSitter took up pole vaulting halfway through the season to further the success of the team. The team placed 2nd at the I-8 junior varsity conference meet, again putting them on top. Showing great performance after astounding display, the group claimed match after match, chanting their trademark "Cocoa Puff" jingle. Returning for the varsity conference, the track crew took home the gold.

Nearing the end of the season, the squad was sure to be remembered. Senior Andrea Norris qualified for both the 100 and 200 meter dashes, placing 1st and 3rd at state. She also accompanied Sierra Griffin, Stephanie Rapciak, and Melissa Patterson in the 4 x 200 relay placing 2nd, and Sierra, Carolyn Sarb and Melissa in the 4 x 100 meter relay to take seventh. Stephanie Rapciak also placed 9th in the 300 meter hurdle finals. Christen Cleveland qualified for the Triple Jump, and Kristen Mullen for the High Jump. "Talent from an athlete like Andrea only comes around about once every twenty years," exclaims Coach Jakalski, "and this kind of talent from the whole team doesn't appear for a lot longer."

Jackie Schuler arrives at prom in a limo.

Prom was held on May 8 at Orland Park Country Club. Couples came dressed in their best attire. Everyone enjoyed dancing and a formal dinner. The time finally came for the announcement of prom king and queen. Daniel Modaff and Erika Buchholz accepted their titles and enjoyed their dance in the spotlight to the prom theme, "Time Goes By". As the dance slowly came to an end groups left with excitement of continuing the night festivities. Many of the students attended the after-prom activities on the cruise around Chicago which ended at 3 a.m. and a bus drove the students back to the school. It was hard for everyone to say goodnight to their perfect night, but memories last forever as time goes by.

Kunal Savkur, Steven Liu, and Anthony Kosar strike a pose.

On Wednesday, May 12, the Senior class got together at the Seven Bridges Signature Room for one of their final times together as a class. It was a time for them to reminisce on old memories they shared throughout their high school career. An elegant dinner was prepared for them while they chatted. During dinner, awards were handed out to those people who were selected by their fellow classmates in Senior Superlatives. After dinner had concluded, several teachers made their way to the front of the room to say a few words to the seniors. Mr. Mark D'Amico stole the show with a speech with much laughter from the audience. Following the speeches, a video of pictures was presented for the senior class, starting with the early year of preschool to their last year in high school. After the video, the yearbooks were distributed to all the classmates. The night was filled with joy, laughter, and sadness, as the seniors knew this would be one of their last nights together before graduation.

The time has come.... for the class of 2004 to move on in their lives. At seven o'clock the students entered the gym for their last time as high school students. Before the ceremony started, the band and choir played and sang songs for the audience and graduates, with recognition of the senior band and choir members. The graduates were excited to be there and ready to move on to a new chapter in their lives, yet sad that their high school days are over.

Many speeches, all of wisdom and advice for the future, were prepared for the students before the diplomas were handed out to the individuals. Class valedictorian, Dan Modaff, and class salutatorian, Emily Johnson, made their way to the front for some inspiring words to their fellow classmates. School board president, Joan Costin, gave her words of advice to the graduating class for the years to come.

The class of 2004 will be greatly missed by all. As they left the gym, they closed the chapter to their high school lives, and begin a new one. Congratulations and good luck to all.
